October, 2009 marks the 8th year of the US war in Afghanistan and 7 years since Congress passed the resolution authorizing war against Iraq. It also commemorates the 40th anniversary of the Vietnam Moratorium that brought hundreds of thousands into the streets to protest the war.

Banned during the Taliban regime, kite flying is a major recreational activity for Afghan boys and some men. (It still remains largely off-limits to girls and women.) It is an important part of Afghan culture - a symbol of freedom and fun.
